copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

And Mr. Clement did have a look at those vouchers.

Russia is resting quietly now, with only an assassination or so at frequent intervals. But for Russia it is quiet.

The latest thing is the street car funeral. That is, the body of the deceased is placed on a street car and the mourners follow in other cars. Yes, it was tried in Chicago, that city which is addicted to fads.

Former Town Treasurer Charles H. Bigelow of Brookfield joins those who have been "vindicated." By the way, there is a lot of vindication in Vermont these days, which naturally leads to the conclusion that somebody is working overtime in bringing false accusations. That's the way it looks on the face of the returns, at any rate.

Louis A. Frothingham, the young man who gave up a sure thing for an uncertainty when he resigned as speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives to become a candidate for mayor of Boston, will be "provided for," according to report. At any rate he has gone to Panama and is said to be slated for something. His response to the "call to duty" may not have been entirely in vain, even if it wasn't appreciated by the voters of Boston.

A NEED IN MONTPELIER.
That Montpelier should have gotten along for ten or a dozen years without a permanent home for its municipal affairs is not a strong argument against a city hall, as is now agitated. The Times may be pardoned the suggestion that the city of Montpelier has arrived at the age and dignity where the city needs a separate building for the housing of its municipal officers. The present makeshift of an office here and an office there and possibly no office at all does not comport with the importance of the capital city of the state. If one were to look for the city judge (and may we avoid him!) he would go in one direction. If it were the genial city clerk and treasurer that was sought, then the seeker would go in another direction. If, perhaps, he was after some of the other officers, he would wander the streets until a happy chance threw the officials in his way. This sort of thing may be inexpensive, but it is demoralizing to the dignity of any community, and for Montpelier it is particularly so. As the capital city of Vermont, Montpelier is looked to for progressiveness and for leadership. So the present agitation, which is not new by any means, looking to the proper housing of the municipal government, is viewed with favor outside, as it undoubtedly is inside of Montpelier. That city should vote next Tuesday to take some proper steps toward remedying the defect. The necessity seems to be recognized.

AN UNUSUAL STATE OF AFFAIRS.

The settlement of a three-years' contract between the local electric railroad and its employees, which was effected Wednesday night of this week, afforded a feature that was rather unusual in the field of labor matters. It was that in spite of the fact that the old agreement expired on January 31 there was no cessation of work because a new agreement had not been drawn up by February 1. Indeed, as affairs turned out, a whole month passed before the new agreement was drawn up and signed. Yet the employees continued at the motor and the bell-cord, confident in the good faith of the company. Then when the new agreement was reached it was dated from the time of the expiration of the old, although a month had intervened, and the men received the benefits of it from February 1. This would not have been possible in most affairs of the sort. There is generally a distrust and unfortunately too well founded—which forbids reliance of employee on employer and vice versa, when it comes to a drawing up of a new scale of wages or the settlement of a dispute. The one looks on the other with distrust and his every move is viewed with suspicion, while the other returns the suspicion with interest. But in this local matter there seems to have been an unusual degree of confidence on both sides, and at the close of the conference each commended the other for its evident willingness to treat the matter fairly. Both the workmen and the company are to be complimented on the result of their deliberations.

KILLED FOUR MEN.

Bandits in Finland in a Dramatic Incident.

Helsingfors, Finland, March 2.—The pursuit of the bandits who last Monday night entered the Russian State bank here, killed the guardian and secured $35,500, resulted yesterday in another highly dramatic incident and cost four more lives at Tammerfors, where two of the fugitives were cornered. One of the bandits got possession of the town hall and held it for hours, but finally was subdued by a stream of water directed by the firemen.

While Commissary of Police Balushin was examining the two captives, one of them grabbed a revolver from the belt of the chief of police and with it killed Balushin. The bandit then dashed up stairs, where he barricaded himself in a room commanding the stairs and lobby and the street outside. There he defied the police for three hours, meanwhile haranguing from the window to a crowd of thousands of persons, many of whom were in sympathy with his socialist speeches.

Two policemen who tried to pick off the desperado from a house opposite, were killed by the bandit who was an excellent marksman. After all other resources had been exhausted the firemen were called out and poured a flood of water into the window. Simultaneously a picked band of police and firemen stormed the stairs. One of the assaulting party was killed and nine were wounded before the bandit who fought desperately with a big knife, could be overpowered.

BODY ON TRACK.

G. B. Gunn of Iton, New York Found Dead.

Little Falls, N. Y., March 2.—The body of G. B. Gunn, aged 73, a retired gun manufacturer of Iton, was found on the New York Central tracks near his home in that village last night.

Pittsburgh's $40,000,000 Deal.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 2.—Pittsburgh's street railways and gas supply have practically passed from the control of the Philadelphia company to the United Railways Investment company of San Francisco, and a deal that involves nearly $40,000,000 is about completed.

SOME CORPORATIONS ARE DELINQUENTS

State Tax Commissioner Says That They Must Pay Their Taxes Charters May Become Null.

Burlington, March 2.—Although a notice was issued to every corporation in the state from the office of J. E. Cushman, state tax commissioner, that unless taxes were paid by March 1 an additional fee would be charged there are a great many, the exact number not yet having been figured, corporations which have failed to pay their tax. A list of these corporations is being prepared and an effort will be made during the present month to collect the amount due. If the taxes are not paid by April 1, the charter of the delinquent corporation becomes null and void, there being no provision for the payment of the tax after that date.

For weeks the force of clerks at Mr. Cushman's office was busy preparing and sending out blanks containing the list of the new law. This involved a great amount of work but it was done so that no corporation could plead ignorance. These notices were sent out about a month ago and were delivered in time so that every corporation could save the additional fee by paying before March 1. This not only includes corporations which have organized and are doing business but also includes those to which charters have been issued but which have never organized. The tax for a corporation with a capital stock of $50,000 or under is $10 a year and the additional fee if the tax was not paid before yesterday is $2.50. For corporations with a capital stock of $100,000 or over $50,000 the tax is $15 with a proportionate increase if not paid by March 1. The tax increases in proportion as the capital stock increases.

A Street Crowd Critic.

A man and a dog came out of a store in D street. The man held a copper wire trap with a rat in it, and the dog barked and leaped excitedly as the man waved the trap teasingly over his head. They had barely crossed the pavement to the street when two passers-by stopped to take a look at what they knew was going to happen. Then two others followed suit, and a negro who was driving an empty coal cart reined in his horse and guffawed so boisterously at the dog's antics as to draw several people from the opposite side. The man kept on waving the trap, the dog kept on barking and the crowd kept on gathering until it fairly blocked the street.

On the outer edge of the commotion two men were overlooking the scene. One had a black beard and a foreign accent, and when a woman who was making a short cut to her work had squirmed out of the mass this is what she heard him say:

"Look at their faces and see for yourself."

"Can't say I agree with you," objected the man, who was plainly local. "You are talking about mobs but this is merely a casual crowd of well-meaning people."

"Exactly. They have probably the means to gratify the average wants of man; can go to theatres and dances, have and take trips and yet it gives them pleasure to see a rat torn to pieces by a dog. Suppose they were so isolated and could not get even so lawful an amusement as rat baiting, and a cry should go up to them: 'This fellow is not fit to live; let's kill him,' what do you suppose this crowd would do?"

The plainly local man laughed with the forbearance due to a stranger within the gates and proceeded to move on. "Your shade of yellow is just a shade too deep," he chuckled when he had stopped laughing. "This crowd's all right; no harm to kill a rat; about the best use you can put him to; don't know how it is in your part of the earth, but this is the good old United States."

"I tell you, my friend, it is not a question of my country or yours. It is the fact of human nature. Excite men in any essential as salt. If you can't get it lawfully as a crowd you turn to it unlawfully as a mob. If you doubt me, read De Maupassant."

The man with the foreign accent was wrong, of course—of course. So was De Maupassant, but—

The woman looked back to see if she could study faces with the foreign man's eyes. The man was holding his trap so high that she caught a glimpse of a furry scrap; its body stiff; its eyes glazed with terror. Then the man made a motion to open the door of the trap. The dog barked frantically, somebody called out "Stop!" and the woman hurried on.—Washington Star.
